Noted Jurist Fled Germany, Was One Of Most Distinguished Refugees To Enrich America

Dr. Arthur Nussbaum, of 468 Riverside Drive, New York, internationally known legal authority, author and professor, died at Harkness Pavilion of a heart attack. He was eighty-seven years old.

When he came to the United States in 1934 as research professor of public law at Columbia University, Dr. Nussbaum was regarded as one of the most distinguished refugee scholars from Nazi Germany, says the New York Times. His prolific writing soon expanded into American legal and monetary problems.

He observed later that the Hitler Government "took the first step toward widening my field of research by removing me from the Berlin law faculty and making life in Germany impossible for me."

Members of the Columbia faculty, joining in a tribute to Dr. Nussbaum on his 80th birthday, wrote in a lead article of the Columbia Law Review of January, 1957, that his major books had become classics that were "read, used, and quoted throughout the Western world."

"Above all," the article stated, "for many years he had been in the forefront of those who preached and practiced a new approach to the study of law."

Dr. Nussbaum was instrumental in inspiring lawyers, teachers and students in the search for a more realistic approach to the study of legal institutions. He [illegible] legal doctrine and principles.

Among his chief works were "Principles of Private International Law" published in 1943; "A Concise History of the Law of Nations" (1947); and "Money and The Law" (1950), says the New York Times. His last book, published five years ago, was "The History of the Dollar."

Dr. Nussbaum was born in Berlin in 1877, was graduated from the University of Berlin in 1897, and received a doctorate of jurisprudence the following year. He was a professor of law at the university for many years.

In 1914 he initiated a trend in legal research with his "Rechtstatsachenforschung" pamphlet, known in English as "Fact Research in Law." This established his life-long theme of integrating theory and practice.

He submitted proposals to revise Germany's commercial arbitration statute in 1913 at the request of the Berlin Chamber of Commerce. His proposals were enacted several years later and the German statute was regarded as one of the best of the modern arbitration laws.

Besides his pioneer work in commercial arbitration, Dr. Nussbaum published outstanding studies on German civil law, commercial law, and criminal psychology. He was noted for clear, concrete, and critical scholarship.

The professor was 56 years of age when he was forced to flee Germany because he was Jewish. He was invited to teach at Columbia, where he continued to maintain an office for writing and research until his death.

Dr. Nussbaum, who was credited with having exerted considerable influence on the doctrine and development of [illegible] days. His work was his principal relaxation, although he had a fondness for music and walking.

His wife, the former Gertrud Eyck, whom he married in 1906, died last May, says the New York Times. Surviving are three daugh-

FOURTEEN MAJOR U.S. JEWISH GROUPS LAUD SCHEMA WHICH SAYS JEWS HAVE NO SPECIAL GUILT IN CRUCIFIXION OF CHRIST

The overwhelming vote by the Ecumenical Council in favor of the proposed declaration by the Roman Catholic Church on Catholic Jewish relations was welcomed "with satisfaction" by fourteen major Jewish organizations, reports Irving Spiegel, in the New York Times. They voiced the hope in a joint statement that final approval "will mark the continuation of a process that will contribute to the effective elimination of anti-Semitism and will lead to better understanding among all peoples."

The schema, or draft declaration, says that the Jews have no special guilt apart from mankind as a whole in the crucifixion of Christ.

Hailing its preliminary adoption, the Jewish groups said that, when the "Council Fathers will have voted its promulgation, the Catholic Church will have made a historic contribution to the advancement of harmonious relations among the peoples of the great faiths."

"We reiterate our belief in the distinctive role of Judaism as a separate faith community in making its contributions to the achievements of the common goals of humanity," the Jewish organizations said.

Joining in the statement were: the American Jewish Committee, the American Jewish Congress, Bnai Brith, the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith, the Central Conference of American Rabbis, the Jewish Labor Committee, the Jewish Theological Seminary of [illegible] Assembly, the Rabbinical Council of America, the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, the Union of Orthodox Congregations of America, the United Synagogue of America and the World Jewish Congress.

The joint statement lauded the efforts of United States cardinals and bishops "who have begun to write a new chapter of understanding and mutual respect among all men." Among those playing strong roles in advancing the schema, says the New York Times, were: Cardinal Spellman, of New York; Albert Cardinal Meyer, of Chicago; Joseph Cardinal Ritter, of St. Louis; and Richard Cardinal Cushing, of Boston.

Before issuing their joint statement, leaders of the fourteen Jewish organizations held a meeting at 515 Park Avenue under the chairmanship of Label A. Katz, president of Bnai Brith and co-chairman of the World Conference of Jewish Organizations.

Commenting on the action by the Ecumenical Council, Morris B. Abram, president of the American Jewish Committee, said the implementation of the schema would depend on the Catholic Church itself, which would have to remove from "its religious texts and liturgy whatever bias and anti-Semitism exists, particularly as related to the deicide charge."

The vote by the Ecumenical Council has served to focus attention on a long history of research and consultation on the religious roots of anti-Semitism.

Scholars and social scientists, both Jewish and Christian, while aware that anti-Semitism has various causes, both political and economic, have long considered the deicide charge a major source of anti-Jewish attitudes.

In principle, the deicide idea, the belief that the Jewish people collectively bear special responsibility for the death of Jesus and therefore are cursed forever, was rejected by the Church more than 400 years ago, says the New York Times. The Council of Trent of 1545-63 ruled that Jesus died voluntarily as the result of the sinfulness of all men.

While the Church has expressed its abhorrence of anti-Semitism on previous occasion, it was not until this century that the principle was translated into specific policies.

In 1959 Pope John XXIII ordered the removal from the Good Friday liturgy of references to "perfidious Jews" (perfidious Jews) and "perfidia Judaica" (Jewish perfidy).

In 1960, certain expressions pejorative to Jews were dropped from the [illegible] consecration of the Host [illegible] in 1570 from the [illegible] Mass.

[illegible] of the [illegible] of the Catholic Church. Yet the charge is still deeply rooted in a considerable part of traditional Catholic teaching, and it finds expression in textbooks and liturgical commentaries.

Augustin Cardinal Bea, head of the Secretariat for the Promotion of Christian Unity, was the chief architect of the schema on Catholic-Jewish relations.

Before it was introduced at Council sessions last year, Cardinal Bea called on the American Jewish Committee to submit memoranda on alleged anti-Semitic bias in Catholic religious texts and materials, says the New York Times. Cardinal Bea also visited the Committee's Institute of Human Relations, in New York, last year and consulted with Jewish religious leaders.

The first of three memoranda prepared by the Committee was entitled: "The Image of the Jews in Catholic Teaching."

"It said that Jews were depicted in parochial school text-books as [illegible]ively and collectively responsible for the death of the Son of God." It said also that "unjust and inaccurate comparisons between Christianity and Judaism" were made.

Christianity, the memorandum noted, is often described in Catholic textbooks as "a religion of love; Judaism as a loveless religion of law."

A second memorandum, entitled "The Jews in Catholic Liturgy," called attention to certain passages in Catholic liturgy that is said to [illegible] hostility against Jews. It [illegible] commentaries [illegible]

A third memorandum, prepared at the suggestion of Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel, theologian and member of the faculty of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, examined tensions between Catholics and Jews from a religious viewpoint, says the New York Times, and offered proposals for relieving these tensions.

Arab States Plan "Freeze" Of Vatican Document On Jews

Amman newspapers continue to give prominence to commentaries and readers' letters, written by Christians of all denominations, denouncing and urging cancellation of the Vatican Council declaration absolving the Jews from the guilt of Christ's crucifixion, says the London Times.

The Latin Patriarchal Vicar in Amman, Mgr. Nimeh Saman, said that the religious authorities had delegated Mgr. George Batch, of Jerusalem Latin patriarchate, to inform Pope Paul VI of the general reaction of indignation caused in Jordan by the declaration. A meeting of Christian notables sent a cable to the Pope requesting that the suggested declaration be dropped from the agenda for next year's session.

Another cable, Mgr. Batch said, was sent by all Christian representatives to the Oecumenical Patriarch Athenagoras in Istanbul, requesting his personal interference "to wipe out" such a declaration "for the sake of church unity" which was [illegible] by both Churches' heads during their last meeting in Jerusalem last January.

Call To Bar Scientists From Nasser's Employ

The National Committee for Labor Israel called on West Germany to forbid its scientists from working in the United Arab Republic toward the "final solution" of Israel. In a unanimous action 1,500 delegates demanded that the Bonn Government pass legislation to deprive the scientists "in Nasser's employ" of their citizenship, says the New York Times, if they failed to end armaments research directed at the destruction of Israel.

The phrase "final solution" was frequently used by Hitler in calling for the mass destruction of Jews.

At the Commodore Hotel, in New York, delegates re-elected Joseph Schlossberg as president; and Rabbi Jacob J. Weinstein as national chairman.

Another resolution commended President Johnson's "profound and abiding interest in the evolution and stabilization of Israel," but it assailed the State Department for treating President Nasser of the United Arab Republic as "a loyal ally of the Free World and as a force of stability in the Middle East."

The delegates set a goal of seven million to be raised next year to help Histadrut, Israel's Labor Federation, to support a network of social service and medical institutions in Israel.

At the concluding session, bronze medallions brought from Israel were presented to the stars and

★ NATIONAL COUNCIL ★

Of Jewish Women of Canada: The Angels' Ball was under the distinguished patronage of the Prime Minister of Canada, the Right Honourable Lester B. Pearson, P.C., and Mrs. Pearson, and the Premier of the Province of Quebec, the Honourable Jean Lesage and Mrs. Lesage. The honoured guests were David Rivlin, Consul-General of Israel, and Mrs. Rivlin; Philippe Benoist, Consul-General of France, and Mrs. Benoist; and Dean Maxwell Cohen, of the Faculty of Law, McGill University, and Mrs. Cohen. Over 1,400 guests attended in the entire banquet floor of the Queen Elizabeth Hotel. Net proceeds from Thrift Shop merchandise support all Council projects. Proceeds from patrons of the Ball are allotted to Council's Golden Age project, a constituent agency of the Federation of Jewish Community Services. Guests were greeted at the head of the escalators in the "Golden Colonnade" where seven huge panels covered the walls to form a background in tones of gold. All the pillars in the foyer were covered with radiant gold material with sprays of gilded floral arrangements, and superimposed with lanterns. Receiving against a bower of yellow chrysanthemums, bronze pom-poms, palms, and palmetto leaves, were: Joseph Hopmeyer and Mrs. Hopmeyer, president of National Council of Jewish Women of Canada; Mr. and Mrs. David Rivlin, Mr. and Mrs. Philippe Benoist; Arthur Victor and Mrs. Victor, chairman of the Angels' Ball; Harold Schneider and Mrs. Schneider, a vice-chairman; Gerald Guttman, and Mrs. Guttman, a vice-chairman. At 7 p.m. guests attended a cocktail party in "The Gilded Cage" where a massive, six-foot centrepiece of a pagoda-shaped bird cage, placed on a gold and lace tablecloth, was flanked by gold candelabra and four cascading fountains. The walls were banked with flowers, palms, and greenery. Six men dressed as Siamese temple dancers assisted, wearing gold lamé costumes. In the combined salons of the Saguenay, St. Maurice, and St. Charles a reception of over four hundred patrons of the Ball took place beyond a golden bower. Individual cocktail tables were covered with gold tablecloths. Receiving were: Mr. and Mrs. Hopmeyer, Mr. and Mrs. Rivlin, Mr. and Mrs. Benoist, Dean and Mrs. Maxwell Cohen, the Honourable Justice Benjamin Robinson and Mrs. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Victor, Mrs. Jacob Elkin, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Myers, co-chairman of the patrons committee; Mr. and Mrs. Joel Salomon, co-chairman. At 8 p.m. guests were ushered into the Grande Salle, "The Golden Candelabra Salon", where each of one hundred round tables covered with gold tablecloths was centred with a twelve-branch gilt candelabra, the base embanked with yellow miniature chrysanthemums. Dinner music was provided by an orchestra. About four hundred guests arrived at 10 p.m. for the "Le Bal Doré" in "The Golden Temple", fashioned with a Thailand decor, by the Robert Simpson Company which developed the entire "doré" theme. In addition to patrons listed here last month are: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ballinsky, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Barkoff, David Becker, Harry Benjamin, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. Congress: The Steering and Organizational Committee of the proposed Allied Jewish Community Services of Montreal has submitted a draft of by-laws for the new organization and proposed central community structure. The Canadian Jewish Congress and the UJRA (Montreal area) are indicated in the proposed by-laws as constituent members of the Allied Jewish Community Services. This committee, appointed to study the proposed structure, following which the issue will be considered by the Eastern Region executive and submitted to the national executive, will be headed by Leon Kronits, chairman of the Region: Monroe Abbey, Q.C.; Nathan Galsin, S. Harvey, Harold Lande, Q. C.; Prof. Perry Meyer, Rabbi S. M. Zambrowsky, Saul Hayes, executive vice-president of Congress. At the meeting were: Monroe Abbey, Q. C.; Ben Beutel, M. Chaikelson, I. Eiley, Nathan Galsin, S. Harvey, Harold Lande, Q. C.; Murray Spiegel, Rabbi S. M. Zambrowsky. At a meeting of the executive of the Eastern Region, in Montreal, Mr. Kronits, presided. Dr. Henry Raphael Gold, of New York, who was visiting Montreal at the invitation of Beth Ora Congregation, was the guest, speaking on the position of Jews in Iran in connection with the celebration of the 2,500th anniversary of the establishment of the Persian Empire by King Cyrus. Dr. Gold visited Iran recently as a lecturer at Teheran University and was also received by Iranian Government authorities and had communication with the Shah of Iran. The celebration coincides with the 2,500th anniversary of the proclamation by King Cyrus permitting Jews to return to Palestine and to rebuild the Temple. A decision was taken to recommend to the national executive that an expression of solidarity be conveyed by the Congress to the Jews of Iran, who are eager to participate in the anniversary celebrations. The matter will also be discussed with the World Jewish Congress and other central Jewish organizations. Dr. Gold also spoke of the work in Iran done by the Joint Distribution Committee, the Alliance Israelite, and the Ozar Hatorah (Canadian Jewish Congress supports this work through its association with these organizations). Julius Richardson Hospital Launches $60,000 Campaign

The Julius Richardson Convalescent Hospital launched its annual campaign to raise $60,000 to complete major structural changes and renovations, Dr. George D. Little, president, announced.

The funds are urgently required to bring existing facilities into line with current demands on the hospital. The hospital's cost for the renovations will be $100,000, of which some $40,000 is held in reserve from previous campaigns. The present appeal objective represents the additional money needed to get the work under way.

The Julius Richardson Hospital, 5425 Bessborough Avenue, Montreal, plays an important part in meeting the city's hospital requirements by admitting patients for convalescent care from the active general hospitals. In this way, the active hospitals receive much needed relief, with a consequent reduction in their high operating costs.

In announcing the campaign, Dr. Little said that some improvements had been made recently, but the need for additional funds to increase facilities was still most urgent. The Quebec Hospital Insurance Service does not cover such costs. He further explained that 97 per cent of funds raised in the campaign will go directly into hospital funds, with only three per cent needed for appeal costs.

The Julius Richardson Hospital is devoted to the care of patients needing convalescent care with physio-occupational therapy services, and is regularly operating with every available bed occupied.

"The need is most urgent and all contributions to meet our requirements will be gratefully received", said Dr. Little.

ROLLED OAT BREAD Co.

When you bake at home use the yeast you can count on . . . Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast, for baking at its best! Try this home-baked-good Rolled-Oat Bread with its nutty flavour and moist—yet light—old-time texture! Just follow this simple step-by-step recipe:

You'll need: 2 c. milk, 2 c. rolled oats, 2 tbsps. granulated sugar, 2 tsps. salt, 2 tbsps. shortening, 2 tbsps. molasses, ½ c. lukewarm water, 1 tsp. granulated sugar, 1 envelope Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast, 3¼ c. (about) presifted all-purpose flour.

1. Scald milk. Combine rolled oats, the 2 tbsps. sugar, salt, shortening and molasses; stir in scalded milk. Cool to lukewarm.

2. Meantime, measure lukewarm water into a large bowl; stir in the 1 tsp. sugar. Sprinkle with yeast. Let stand 10 mins., then stir well. Stir in lukewarm oat mixture and 1 c. of the flour. Beat until smooth and elastic. Work in sufficient additional flour to make a soft dough—about 2½ c. more.

3. Knead on floured board until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl. Grease top. Cover. Let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk—about 1¼ hours.

4. Punch down dough. Turn out and knead until smooth. Divide into 2 equal portions. Cover with a tea towel and let rest 10 mins. Shape each portion into a loaf and place in a greased loaf pan (4½ x 8½ inches, top inside measure). Grease tops. Cover. Let rise until doubled in bulk—about 40 mins. Bake in a hot oven (400°) 45 to 50 mins. Makes 2 loaves.

KASHA KNISHES

three cups flour
one level teaspoon salt
three tablespoons oil
one egg
one to one and one-half cups lukewarm water

Sift flour and salt into a large bowl. Make a well in centre. Add oil, and beaten egg. Mix together, gradually adding water. Form into a soft ball, adding flour if necessary, to handle. Sprinkle oil over dough, cover with a towel, let stand over-night at room temperature.

Filling

four large onions
one egg
one box kasha

Brown onions in oil or shortening. In a roasting pan, add kasha; pepper and salt to taste. Add egg and mix well. Toast kasha in oven until lightly browned; add boiling water enough to cover kasha; and bake for thirty or forty minutes, at 350 degrees until water is absorbed and kasha is soft. Add browned onions, and mix well. On a floured board roll out half of dough very thin. Place kasha mixture along the edge, and roll up like a jelly roll, two or three times; cut off remaining dough. Repeat until filling has been used up. With a sharp knife, cut into two-inch pieces; seal ends, and flatten. Bake on a slightly-greased cookie sheet, at 375 degrees for fifty to sixty minutes, or until lightly browned. If there is remaining dough, roll out very thin on a floured board, spread with a thin layer of jam and three or four peeled, sliced apples. Sprinkle with sugar. Roll as for jelly roll; and bake at 375 degrees. Slice, and serve warm. Kasha is buckwheat.

Chanuka At Degania Bet In Israel

By Ida G. Cowen, In the Congress Bi-Weekly, of the American Jewish Congress

One Chanuka, not long ago, I decided to visit friends at Degania Bet in the Jordan valley, one of Israel's oldest and loveliest kibbutzim. No sooner had I stepped off the bus, when I heard the following message circulating among the settlement's members: "Open the air raid shelters; supply yourself with warm clothing; man the shelter telephones."

The Syrians, it seemed, had been sniping at field workers of a nearby agricultural community. Word came informally that today "our" army was on hand. If the Syrians attacked again, the Israeli soldiers would retaliate.

My hosts, Aminadab Israeli, principal of the elementary school and his wife, Shoshanna, an eighth-grade teacher, and I were talking quietly in their pleasant, book-lined living-quarters. A smile flickered across Aminadab's face as he remarked, "War may break out tomorrow morning, yet here w. sit calmly discussing some matter of education."

As if to emphasize his words, there was a knock at the door and a young soldier, a relative of Shoshanna's, entered. He was stationed nearby and had come in for a short visit with the family. Immediately he was invited to spend the night. This he had to decline. He was under orders to return to his contingent, which was bivouacked for the night somewhere nearby. He was a soldier — and duty came first.

The next morning we walked about, looked in at the shelters — open and "ready for business." We wandered over to the far edge of the kibbutz to see the beautifully kept cemetery. Nearby was a woman member of the settlement working at her gardening. "You'd better not stay too long in this area today," she advised us. "How about yourself?" we inquired. Came the quick reply, "But this is my job. I must finish my day's work."

I had come from Jerusalem to spend part of the festival week at Degania Bet. Schools are closed in Israel for the entire period of Chanuka and everyone seems to be on the move. City people go to the country, and country people go to the city. From previous experience I knew that Tel Aviv, where I thought I might visit, would be jammed with visitors. So I decided to escape the crowds and go to the peace and quiet of the country.

Transportation is relatively simple — that is, for Israel. Daily, there is a seven o'clock morning bus leaving Jerusalem for Tiberias, which is close to Degania Bet. Five days before the planned trip, I go to the bus terminal in Jerusalem to buy a bus ticket (it's holiday time and I want to be assured of a seat). I'm told that tickets are not yet available; ticket sale commences only forty-eight hours before scheduled departure. Three days later, I'm at the bus terminal once more, in midmorning.

"All tickets for Tiberias have been sold." What does one do now? After some heated talk back and forth, I'm advised to see the manager, whom I finally locate in his little cubicle. By this time I have forgotten whatever Hebrew I ever know. I'm a helpless American tourist, adrift in the maze of Israeli transportation.

The manager is probably thinking, "Haven't we enough problems of our own? Why doesn't this rich American tourist hire a taxi, anyway?" But outwardly he is all politeness and courtesy.

After a consultation, into which are drawn a few more representatives of the bus line, he comes up with a solution. On the day of the trip I'm to report directly to him. "But come no later than six-thirty in the morning," and he will personally see that I get a number entitling me to a seat on the bus.

He was true to his word. I even felt a little guilty as my number is called ahead of some others. I settle down at a window seat and watch the rest of the company assemble. There are bundles galore. It's a four-hour trip; naturally, one provides oneself with food enough to last a couple of days. The distance between Jerusalem and Tiberias is only seventy miles — as the crow flies. But the direct route means crossing Jordanian territory, and our bus must take a roundabout course that stays entirely within Israeli soil.

Two travellers across the aisle hold my attention. One is a young girl in slacks reading a book entitled Russia. Her companion is a pais boy, with yarmulke and payot, also holding an open book — the Bible. His attention is riveted on the page and his lips keep moving as he reads.

Before long I am deep in conversation with my own seatmeate. She is young, cheerful, bubbling. Her husband, a yeshiva bochur, has found a place somewhere else on the bus, she tells me. I learn that they have been married just six months. They will spend the holiday with her family, in Tiberias, where she had been a kindergarten teacher before her marriage.

How does a Tiberias teacher come to marry a Jerusalem yeshiva bochur? It was arranged. She has a married sister living in Jerusalem. She went for a visit to her sister. He called on her brother-in-law. Neither of the visitors looked directly at, or spoke to the other.

Another day, by arrangement, they passed one another while walking on Ben Yehuda Street — so they could have a face-to-face glance at each other. They passed inspection favorably. Then her father came to Jerusalem to talk business with the matchmaker. And only after the yeshiva bochur had received a favorable reply when he took counsel with his rebbe did the marriage take place. They were never alone in each other's company until after the wedding ceremony.

The stipend which he received as a yeshiva bochur had been increased when they were married and would be further increased when their child was born. She took great pride in the family into which she had married. Imagine it — his father had been sent on a mission to America to raise funds for the yeshivot! And when he returned from the U.S. the father's first question of the son who came to welcome him at the Lydda airport, she told me glowingly, was not an inquiry about the well-being of the family. Oh no! The first question the father

Central Conference Of American Rabbis Pleads Against Nuclear Weapons For Germany

"Do not repeat the horror of the six million by rearming Western Germany with nuclear weapons" was the burden of a plea by the 875-member Central Conference of American Rabbis to President Lyndon B. Johnson. In a letter, Rabbi Leon I. Feuer, of Toledo, president of the Reform Jewish rabbinic body in the United States and Canada, implored the President: "We call upon you not to listen to the unwarranted pressure to bestow upon Western Germany greater control over nuclear weapons and thus neglect the past and jeopardize the future. We do not believe that it is consistent with your proposals at Geneva for nuclear freeze and non-proliferation agreements. It imperils rather than safeguards American and world security by causing serious political dissension among our allies, by diminishing prospects for successful negotiations with the Soviet Union, and by providing a pretext for military counter-measures."

The communication was also sent to Secretary of State Dean Rusk and the State Department, adding: "As religious leaders of the Jewish people we have learned by experience that we should be cautious about any moves which would revive German military might. We look upon MLF (MULTI-LATERAL FORCE) and similar plans as first steps from which it would be difficult to retreat, and which would invariably generate momentum for further steps leading to a European force with Germany as its core, and potentially even toward an independent German nuclear capability. We see no immediate emergency in Europe which justifies precipitous action by our government in imposing upon our NATO allies a new nuclear system which is neither to their liking nor of their choosing."

The CCAR called upon the President and government to explore alternate measures for permitting allies to enjoy a greater sense of participation in their own defense without deleteriously complicating the military and political status quo. It welcomed the re-appraisal called for by the Conference of NATO Parliamentarians of American proposals for a multilateral nuclear force, and called upon all the nations in the world to recognize that ultimately the peace of the world lies in disarmament and political settlements patiently and peacefully negotiated.

A resolution passed at the national conference in June, stated; "We voice our condemnation of MLF and call upon our government to pursue those policies begun in Geneva which would decrease the danger of nuclear warfare. The events of the intervening months have given greater force to our continuing opposition to MLF and to the ascendancy of Germany as a military power, as reflected in the recently concluded German-American military agreements."

CANADIAN JEWISH CONGRESS DESIGNATED FOR REPRESENTATION ON ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON SCHOOL PLANNING OF PROTESTANT SCHOOL BOARD OF GREATER MONTREAL

Canadian Jewish Congress was designated by the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal for representation on an Advisory Committee on School Planning being set up by the Board.

The Advisory Committee will implement suggestions projected recently by the Quebec Minister of Education of "an accelerated program for the development and financing of the regional school equipment according to a comprehensive plan". The program calls for the establishment of advisory bodies in each region to take inventory of existing facilities, study population trends and movements, and assess future needs for the region within a composite high school framework. The program has been designated by the Quebec Minister of Education as "Operation 55", implying "55 regional school boards, 55 regional school organization plans, 55 networks of regional school equipment".

The Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal is a regional school body under the provisions of Operation 55, having been constituted since July, 1946 along the lines now laid down for the organization of regional school boards.

As reported in the Montreal Star (November 25), "Groups to be represented on the advisory committee were chosen from a long list of organizations. Their selection was based on their being most representative of a cross-section of the community. Creating a larger unit, the executive committee recommendation said, would make the advisory group unwieldy. But board members said that the committee's size and membership might change. They said, also, that other organizations would be called upon for advice".

The groups designated for representation are: Quebec Federation of Protestant Home and School Associations (Montreal Region); Protestant Men Teachers' Association of Greater Montreal; Federation of Protestant Women Teachers of Greater Montreal; Protestant High School Women Teachers' Association of Greater Montreal; Secondary School Principals' and Vice-Principals' Association; Quebec Association of Independent Schools; Montreal Technical Institute; McGill University; Sir George Williams University; Federation of Association of Parents of French-Speaking Protestant Children of Quebec; Provincial Association of Vocational Schools; Y.M. and Y.W.H.A., of Montreal; YWCA; YMCA; Canadian Jewish Congress (Montreal Branch); Montreal Ministerial Association; Montreal Council of Women; Council for Exceptional Children (Quebec Chapter); Montreal Council of Social Agencies, Canadian Manufacturers' Association; Montreal Board of Trade; National Office Management Association (Montreal Branch); and Montreal Labor Council.

INCREASING INFLUX OF NORTH AFRICAN JEWS IS PRESSING PROBLEM TO J.I.A.S.

"The most pressing problem facing the Jewish Immigrant Aid Services (JIAS) in 1964 is the steadily increasing influx of North African Jews into Canada," Dr. Joseph Kage, the agency's national executive director, said in an interview with the Montreal Gazette upon his return from Europe.

"These newcomers, primarily French-speaking," continued Dr. Kage, "do not find, as a rule, on their arrival in Canada well-established relatives and friends. Their countrymen who preceded them to Canada are themselves recent arrivals.

"We estimate that there are more than 3,000 French-speaking Jews now living in Montreal," Dr. Kage disclosed. "Most of them have settled here during the past five years."

"These newcomers," he added, "are all 'Sephardim', adherents of the religious tradition practiced by Jews in North Africa and the Near East. They are anxious to retain their tradition and this poses additional problems of adjustment as part of a Jewish community which predominantly follows the 'Ashkenazi' religious tradition of Eastern Europe."

The Jewish Immigrant Aid Services is a beneficiary of the Joint Campaign for Combined Jewish Appeal and United Israel Appeal.

"JIAS is trying to resolve and lessen the problems faced by North African Jews coming to Canada in various ways," Dr. Kage continued. "Immigrants are met at transport terminals upon arrival by trained members of JIAS staff and in this way initial feelings of loneliness and strangeness of a new country are reduced.

"Immediate concerns of housing, food, suitable clothing, as well as financial assistance, if necessary, are all taken care of by JIAS.

"One of the most important aspects of JIAS service," Dr. Kage stated, "is to ensure that the newcomers are made aware of the various Jewish community services available to them, to advise them on where to obtain suitable Hebrew education for their children, to direct them to synagogues, to inform them fully on health and social services."

Dr. Kage represented Canada at a recent migration conference in Geneva of United Hias, the overseas Jewish migration agency, a beneficiary of the Joint Campaign through the United Jewish Relief Agencies of Canada. All phases of immigrant aid and resettlement were reviewed by the delegates and Dr. Kage delivered an address on "Trends in Canadian Immigration." He also became acquainted with problems experienced by Jewish immigrant aid services in other parts of the world at various conference sessions.

While in Europe, Dr. Kage also visited Austria, Italy, France, Spain, and certain areas in North Africa, where he met Canadian immigration officials, representatives of Hias and other bodies dealing with immigration and resettlement.

In recent years, JIAS has had outstanding success with its special language classes. For the 1964 academic year, more than 1,000 students are enrolled for instruction in the French and English languages. These classes meet twice weekly at St. Kevin School and Ecole Nazareth in Montreal.

its document exonerating the Jews from guilt in the Crucifixion, says the New York Times. President Charles Helou, of Lebanon, is expected to undertake a mission on behalf of Arab governments and he may visit the Vatican.

Mr. Helou is the only Christian Arab head of state. A Catholic of the Maronite rite, he served in 1958 as Lebanon's Ambassador to the Holy See and was said to have been influential in preventing Vatican recognition of Israel.

The Ecumenical Council's recent declaration absolving the Jews in the Crucifixion of Jesus touched off protests throughout the Arab world. It was interpreted as a step toward Vatican recognition of Israel.

The Jordanian Premier, Bahjat Talhouni, said his government would consider blacklisting all Catholic bishops who voted in favor of the declaration. Jordan later dropped the plan, which would have barred the bishops from the Holy places in the Jordanian sector of Jerusalem.

Bishops in Jordan issued a statement explaining that the document on the Jews, reports the New York Times, was meant to emphasize the Catholic Church's desire to maintain ties of love and friendship with all non-Christians, including Moslems.

asked his son was, "And what are you studying now?"

We reached Tiberias and I took my leave of my new friend. I went on alone to the tropically lush community of Degania Bet close to the shore of the Sea of Galilee to begin my Chanuka holiday.

The kibbutz school had its own festival celebration one evening. We assembled in the open with a muster of military precision and a ceremony of lighting the torches. The school auditorium had the aura of a temple, with its windows, in stained glass effect, showing scenes from the Chanuka story. The children's orchestra, the choir, the dramatic presentations, all acquitted themselves well. So did the cooks who prepared the traditional refreshments of potato latkes.

But there was one number on the program which was not traditional. Pupils of the school, members of families who were olim AadasAim — newcomers to Israel during the past year — received a special certificate of award provided by the Jewish National Fund. This mark of welcome and acceptance into the family of Israel I found very moving.

One particular Chanuka ritual I witnessed at Degania Bet will always remain stamped on my memory. It was at the close of the day when the air raid shelters had been prepared and manned — just in case. Night had fallen as children and many adults assembled in a designated area, each with a lantern at the end of a long stick. At a specified signal the lights in the kibbutz were extinguished and the lanterns were lit.

Then, in long procession, we wound round the kibbutz, lantern lights glowing in the darkness. The file came to a halt in front of the communal dining room where a great menorah had been set up. With traditional benediction and songs, the torches were kindled.

Had this been the first night of the festival, how poignantly appropriate would have been the additional benediction then recited, "Blessed are Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, Who has preserved us alive, sustained us and enabled us to reach this season."

My heart was uplifted. The forces of light had conquered over the forces of darkness and evil. It was a declaration to the world — here we are and here we intend to remain! It was good to have been at Degania Bet during that Chanuka season.
